

NEW TECHNOLOGIES OF ART

PROGRAM ADDITIONS AND CHANGES

---

Saturday, October 26

Noon     The Equipment Demonstrations scheduled during the lunch break have been cancelled to allow more time for personal exchange of ideas.

3:20     Michael Hayden, Sculptor in light and creator of aerial light works.

Michael Hayden uses light and electronic technology as a poet might choose language in creating works of great beauty. He brings to his work a background in science as well as art and extensive experimentation with neon and holography. For his current architectural installations he seeks a more sophisticated interaction with the observer. A recent neon sculpture in New Orleans is controlled by an infrared sensor. A person approaching activates a computerized change in the color pattern.

"The computer has a full 24 hour day of real time programming which is run off its own clock," Hayden explains. "This way the chances of anyone seeing the same pattern of color occurring twice is truly minimal."

About technology he comments: "No contemporary artist has a full comprehension of all the technologies available to us today. The extent of expertise in all fields of human interest has long eliminated any recurrence of the Renaissance man - the all round genius . . . I utilize the technological tools accessible to me only to resolve the sculptural problems I generate for myself, as is the case with all art and artists."
